Points to consider as you design your program evaluation:

- If you have more than one presenter, you must allow the participant to evaluate each separately. A good way to accomplish this is by repeating Items 6, 7, and 8 based on the number of presenters and inserting the presenter name. When the program is a conference with sessions, the best way to evaluate each presenter is to evaluate each session individually.
- Each item should only evaluate one concept.
- Items related to personal growth or applicability to personal issues are not appropriate for professional continuing education program evaluations.
